Mayor Sidesteps, Insisting Minister Refrain From Giving Any Facts at "Investigation"

Rev. Scott Asked to Confine Himself to Single Interrogation.

INTERFERES ALL CHARGES

Abundant Proof For All That Has Been Said, "And I Have the Proof," He Tells Mayor and Great Crowd at City Hall; Chief Defends Force.

Instead of the minister it was the mayor that backed down Friday night when the hour came for the so-called "investigation" at city hall, before council, in the mayor's remarks made by Rev. Francis J. Scott, in his sermon last Sunday night, regarding the administration of affairs in the city by Mayor Dugan.

At a conference of council, representing the mayor and the minister, preceding the calling of Rev. Scott to talk, the mayor insisted that Rev. Scott refrain from giving any "information" on alleged lawlessness in the city and that he confine himself exclusively to a remark credited to him to the effect that the mayor is "led around by every crook that comes along."

The through that urged into council, however, was not very well aware of what had transpired at the conference of council, but he accounted for the mayor's attitude by Mr. Scott, in answering the mayor that, "It is not his intent this evening, that the charges be substantiated."

To use that term, the mayor "caught a tartar" when he attempted to have Rev. Scott explain the statement to the effect that the mayor was "led around by every crook that comes along."

When the minister had given his explanation the mayor had nothing with which to make answer, or if he had he did not use it; and he did not ask for explanation of any other statement credited to the minister, although there were several to which he had previously taken exception.

Rev. Scott reiterated that what he had said was true, and declared there was abundant proof for every word of it. He offered, furthermore, to give the mayor and the chief of police the evidence, if they wanted it, saying that it is not wise to "unwind the whole ball of twine" at once.

Far from "backing down," Rev. Scott made this offer:

"If you'll give me your promise that you'll back up the chief of police if I have a conference with him and put some facts into his hands."

"Will stand by him," the mayor replied. "I want him to clean up the town."

When it is cleaned up I have the being of evidence to be presented to the minister, returned. He exhibited a book containing information in his hand.

The largest crowd that ever assembled at city hall, so far as recollection goes, jammed into and attempted to jam into council chamber, because a third of those who sought entry within the doors. It was a mixed audience, divided for and against the minister and the mayor. Judging by the applause the minister scored practically at the points, the noise at one time reaching the point of cheering.

While the resolution of council fixed the hour for 7 o'clock, the official notice of the mayor did not designate any hour and Rev. Scott, by reason of his sermon, was unable to come earlier than 7 o'clock. He arrived with Rev. W. Hutchinson and Secretary W. F. Underwood of the Y. M. C. A. Chief of Police McDonald, with difficulty, forced a passage way through for them. Other ministers, who wanted to get in but were unable to, were Rev. J. L. Proudfit, Rev. G. W. Bonner and Adjutant John Campbell of the Salvation Army. Rev. John H. Lamberton got within hearing distance.

Previous to this, the mayor had called for Rev. Scott and when it was explained he would not arrive until 7:30, he demanded to know if the Courier was represented. A member of the staff in the capacity of reporter, however, declined to state to the ministering editor. It did not seem to increase the amiability of the chief executive. The statement read:

Mr. John L. Case, managing editor, respectfully declines to state, that it is the right, privilege or function of Mayor John Dugan to institute or conduct an investigation into what is and what is not proper to admit as news matter to the columns of The Courier.

Mr. Case therefore, feels himself to be under no obligation or compulsion to comply with the "investigation" hearing held at April 30th, 1921.

The mayor read it over carefully. He did not say anything for a moment. That is his way of thinking things so he can deny the facts of the fact that the mayor has a copy of The Courier before him the story of the sermon in plain

WEST PENN CUTS WAGES OF CARMEN FIVE CENTS HOUR

Reduction Made Necessary, Statement Says, by Reduced Receipts.

TRACKMEN ALSO AFFECTED

Hourly Wage For This Class Now 40 Cents an Hour, Instead of 45; Retrenchment More Expected By Men Who Are in Touch With Conditions.

The West Penn railway company has announced a slight reduction in the wages of its carmen and trackmen. At the same time the lay-off of 15 employees at the shops in connection with its retrenchment movement is also announced.

Because of the falling off of 30 per cent in receipts since the early part of January the change has become imperative, the company announces. Employees were looking for the reduction and evidently have accepted it, there being little comment on the cut. It was smaller than had been expected.

The reduction for carmen is five cents an hour, instead of 45 cents for the first three months of employment as has been the scale, carmen will get 50 cents. For the next nine months the rate of pay will be 53 cents instead of 48 cents and thereafter the carmen will receive 55 cents an hour instead of 50.

The trackmen have been cut twice within the past month. The rate is now 40 cents instead of 50.

"I wish Mr. Gans had signed this. Read it out," He handed the note to Councilman Jesse A. Cyphar who read it.

"He can't do it, but he doesn't want to give any facts. Wonderful man, isn't he?" continued the mayor. He did not explain what the note was, but there was nothing authentic on which to base belief that Konstantine Fehrenbach would submit to President Ebert the resignation of the German cabinet because of its failure to secure intervention by the United States.

Indication was given on the other hand that Berlin was expected to make at least one more attempt to avert occupation of the Ruhr district. It seemed probable that the economic phase of the French advance into Germany would receive close attention at today's council meeting.

U. S. Steel Charged With Unfairness By Federal Board

WASHINGTON, April 29.—A formal complaint against the United States Steel Corporation and 11 subsidiary companies, alleging unfair competition in interstate commerce, has been filed by the Federal Trade Commission. Thus the commission finally has decided that it has sufficient jurisdiction to take up the long-standing complaints by various users of steel products and others against the alleged use by the corporation of the device known as "the Pittsburgh plus price."

The steel corporation and its subsidiaries are given 30 days to make formal answer to the complaint, after which the case will proceed to trial on its merits. The complaint was issued under the Clayton Anti-Trust Act and the law establishing the commission, and the commission's announcement said the case was "an outgrowth of conditions complained of by more than 2,700 manufacturers of steel in the Chicago, Duluth and Birmingham districts, by legislators of three states, by several municipalities and by chambers of commerce and many business organizations throughout the United States."

It is alleged in the complaint that use of the Pittsburgh plus price enables Pittsburgh steel manufacturers to secure substantially 50 per cent of the steel manufacturing business in the United States; that in order to retain such percentage, it retards as much as necessary the natural steel manufacturing growth of other sections of the country; that the price enables the steel manufacturers to maintain substantially uniform prices throughout the country; that the price enables the high cost steel manufacturing plants at Pittsburgh to maintain sufficiently high prices for their product to operate at a profit without having their business jeopardized by the lower cost of steel manufacturing in other sections; enables the lower cost steel manufacturing plants outside of Pittsburgh to secure not only the profit which the high cost Pittsburgh steel manufacturing plants secure, but unduly large additional profits because their manufacture at a much lower cost, and that the Pittsburgh plus price enables the steel manufacturers outside of Pittsburgh to increase their profits each time the railroad transportation charges on steel are increased.

"First, I want to say I came here this evening out of courtesy. I have not come because I recognized any authority in this meeting at all. I am not recognizing any right that council has to order me to come. But as a matter of courtesy to the mayor I am present."

"Second, I want to thank the mayor for the privilege of being here. Long as I have been preaching I have never had the opportunity to talk to a body like this. I wish I had the time to preach this sermon (of Sunday night) all over to you again. I want to thank the mayor also because he has caused this sermon to be much more effective than it would have been otherwise. The action the mayor has taken gives some importance to the sermon. The trouble with too many of my sermons is that people listen to them and then go out and forget them. So I am thankful to the mayor for this impressive little bit of advertising he has given to the message."

"The next thing I want to say is this. I will be very glad to see you fellows out at church next Sabbath morning and evening."

"Another thing in connection with the message is this, that it was given for the purpose of injuring anybody, nor to cast any reflections on anybody. That was not in my mind. My purpose was to create public sentiment that would help to put down the evils that are round about that folks may become stirred up and realize that the situation is as bad and worse than that I talked about. What I said was true and the facts themselves are very much worse than any message I brought could indicate. As a citizen I am concerned for the welfare and good name of the city. I am concerned as

FRENCH OPPOSE PLAN TO GIVE GERMAN TIME

British Suggestion to Allow Seven Days to Pay Reparations Not Favored.

RUHR WILL BE OCCUPIED

France Announces Determination to Send Troops Into Germany in Dispute; Premier Briand to Lloyd George; Belgians Have Same Views.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, April 30.—An ultimatum to Germany giving her seven days from May 1 to comply with or refuse the allied reparations demands was being advocated today by the British representatives to the allied conference here.

This proposal was opposed by the French and the Belgians on the grounds that it was unnecessary as the Germans already had had sufficient time.

The French held that the default of Germany in her treaty obligations calls for immediate military and economic action and that if no sending should come afterwards, it is understood the Belgian ministers also favored this course.

LONDON, April 30.—Determination on the part of France to order her troops into the Ruhr district of Germany in default of payment of reparations to the Allies was expressed to Prime Minister Lloyd George by Premier Briand here today. The two premiers met for an informal conference this morning and planned later to meet Count Storck, Italian foreign minister on his arrival in London.

During their private conversation, Mr. Lloyd George, Premier Briand and Count Storck it was believed, would pave the way to quick decision at the final meeting of the Supreme Allied council which had been called for 1 o'clock this afternoon. It was not expected the United States would be represented at either meeting.

Reports of an impending ministerial crisis in Berlin were current, but there was nothing authentic on which to base belief that Konstantine Fehrenbach would submit to President Ebert the resignation of the German cabinet because of its failure to secure intervention by the United States.

Indication was given on the other hand that Berlin was expected to make at least one more attempt to avert occupation of the Ruhr district. It seemed probable that the economic phase of the French advance into Germany would receive close attention at today's council meeting.

PATTERSON AVENUE CITIZENS DESIRE BIDS ON WILLITE

Council Will Be Asked to Advise For Figures on That Process.

WOULD BE MUCH CHEAPER

Citizens of Patterson avenue, which thoroughfare is to be improved this year, are anxious that council should include bids for willite in their advertisement, asking prices for the work there.

A body of citizens responsible in a great measure for the stalling of the petition asking the improvement of the street, is desirous of having contractors also make bids for the chemical process, as well as for brick and concrete.

The difference in prices on paving Crawford avenue and re-surfacing it have created interest among property holders along that street, who believe the willite ought to prove an excellent material for the street, inasmuch as it would be cheaper and would not be subjected to travel even as heavy as that which will abuse it on Crawford avenue.

Patterson avenue, for the most part, has only a slight grade and it is believed an excellent roadbed could be secured by scraping off the surface dirt, filling in with crushed stone and covering this with the re-surfacing material. So great is the difference in the cost of re-surfacing and repaving Crawford avenue that Patterson avenue residents desire to benefit by the same method and council will be asked to include willite in the advertisement for bids.

Council has already passed a resolution asking bids on the street, specifying a brick paving block and concrete, but it will be asked to take no action on them until further ones on the other material are received.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 25.—(Delayed.)—The Scorpion, veteran of the Spanish-American war, is engaged here when the United States joined the allies, and now Admiral Dinkelschlag, has been ordered to the Scorpion. "The Scorpion has been mentioned more much of the time since 1905, when it became a dispatch boat, for the Navy Department."

From the deck of the gunboat Scorpion, flying the flag of the United States, the officers and men, with no little amusement, beheld the evidently Teutonic crews of the erstwhile ships of the German navy hastily donning their German caps and donning Moslem fezes as the Turkish flag was hoisted to the masthead.

Throughout the war the Scorpion was a valuable point of observation for the events which occurred in the near east. When the United States became a belligerent it quietly interned, since there was no declaration of war with Turkey, and nothing to be gained by this little vessel risked almost certain destruction by an effort to run the Dardanelles in order to reach the naval forces of the Allies.

Thrilling Times For Crew.

This, however, does not mean that the Scorpion's wartime existence was wholly monotonous. It had its thrills and its opportunities for service. When Turkey entered the war the crew of the Scorpion was invaluable to Mr. Morgenthau in guarding embassies and helping to get the retreating allied officials and thousands of non-

Wagonloads of Literature Seized by Police During Raids in New York

RING LEADERS CAPTURED

Maps Disclose Strength of Communist Element in All Parts of Country; Many Found in Western Pennsylvania and W. Va. Communities.

By Associated Press.

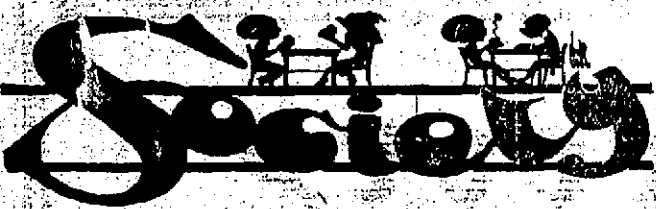

NEW YORK, April 30.—New York's entire police force of 11,000 men was today ordered to remain on duty continuously until Monday morning, as a measure of precaution against possible May Day violence or radical demonstration. Bluecoats were detailed to guard churches, public buildings and meeting places while others were assigned to protect private residences and individuals believed to be in danger. Many others were held in station houses for emergency calls. Assignment of police to various halls and auditoriums was announced and members of the bomb squad, augmented by regulars, were sent to ferret out a number of radicals believed to be active in the plans to cause a great demonstration here.

Police declared the arrest late last night of Abram Jakira and Jacob Anter, who were held on charges of criminal anarchy, had broken the spirit of Communist workers who expected to bring about a demonstration tomorrow. These men, charged by the police with having several wagon loads of radical literature in their possession, were said to have been officers of the Third Internationale and in constant communication with Moscow. They were taken in custody in the apartment of Mrs. Helen Ware, daughter of Mrs. Ella Reeves Bloor, national organizer of the Communist party in this country.

In the seized literature the police said they found circulars similar to those scattered here and in various other large cities calling attention to the industrial conditions in the United States and urging overthrow of government. Several loaded revolvers also were found, it was reported.

One of the trunks, police said, was filled with maps of the United States containing statistics of the strength of the revolutionary groups. The maps revealed the total membership of the groups in every city and community of any size throughout the United States and disclosed more than 95 per cent of the members of the radical organizations were foreigners, Russians, Poles and Italians were found to be in the majority of the membership of the Red organization of which Jakira and Anter were affiliated, the police claimed, and statistics revealed that in the mining districts of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, as well as in some other states east of Chicago, the percentage of radicals was very high.

PITTSBURGH, April 30.—Four men were arrested here today while distributing radical literature, among workmen, as they were leaving their places of employment. Many of the pamphlets were signed "American Freedom Foundation much tonight as I was last Sabbath. I will be concerned just as much next Sabbath. I hold that every man who lives in a city and makes his living out of it is willing to stay in it ought to be proud of the city. He ought to be proud to do his best for it. He should be ashamed to do any less for it.

"Again I want to bring to your minds that the message was impressed on me by conditions that are prevailing here. It is a condition which should make every one's heart sad—to see so many boys go wrong, so many young girls losing their purity. That stirred me up. That thing can be stopped and you ought to do everything to enforce the law."

"Another thing, Mr. Mayor, there was no thought of any reflection on the personal character of any one. This is said by way of explanation and not with any thought of an apology. For everything that was said there, abundant proof and I have the proof." "Next thing the sermon was not written. None of my sermons are written. Consequently what might be said or might be reported could not be gained. The sermons are delivered extemporaneously. They are prepared carefully and thought out carefully but the words come on the inspiration of the moment. What was in The Courier I take to be substantially correct. There may have been some things that would not leave just the same impression if they came in the full sweep of the sermon. However, I want to state that the facts as the minister had them are substantially correct."

"I had understood that the mayor asked me to present some evidence regarding the whole sermon, some facts to substantiate what I said. I understand now that was not his intent this evening; that he does not want the evidence. All that he wants me to say is regarding the statement made about himself."

"First that statement has been given several times by personal friends of the mayor and some of his own political friends. They gave this to excuse the condition of affairs under the mayor's administration."

"Here the mayor interrupted, for the first time. He said it was unfair to the friends of himself, not to name the friends. 'It leaves great big doubt clean through,' he said. There was a laugh at this."

Rev. Scott did not name anybody.

"In the first place that is a common expression," he resumed. "There are three things, Mr. Mayor, that can be given to account for a man's administration of a city. You may administer the affairs of a city and permit things to happen because you are ignorant of the facts. The second thing is that you may permit evil to happen because he is ignorant of the facts."

"The third is that he is a hale fellow, well met, easily led around and may have these things done when he himself may not approve them; you may have some strings attached to you. I would not place you in the first two classes. The last named is the charitable view to take. A man often does things because he is a hale fellow, well met. He is inclined to follow some process that his friends think he should."

"The mayor had no reply to this. Rev. Scott said he thought he had very good precedent for the remarks made in his sermon. Referring to the mayor having presided at the time Prohibition Commissioner Kramer was here a few months ago, speaking at the high school, Mr. Scott said he was amazed as president of the ministerial association for permitting the mayor to introduce the speaker. He said he defended the mayor, saying that he had made a very good speech, when he was laughed at. 'They said I was pulled around by the mayor, led around by the mayor,' he explained."

"At that time, Mr. Mayor," he continued, "you laid down some specific rules for the ministers. You told us what we ought to do. I thought if the mayor should tell us what we ought to do, I would have a perfect right in coming back at you."

Large applause and laughter greeted this reply.

The mayor replied that the sermon and subsequent publication in the news "looked like a blackguardly way of doing it. 'You associated me with crooks,' he said."

"I preached the sermon and made an suggestion that it be published in The Courier," Rev. Scott replied. "The facts are true and this town and everybody here know they are there."

"Well, I have a little here," said the mayor. He proceeded to read what he said was a quotation from Grover Cleveland. He had read the same thing in council Monday night in criticism of Rev. Scott and The Courier. It ran thus:

"The elements or factors of the most approved outfit for pinching a side and bareheaded accusation before the public appears to be first someone with business and motives to invent it; second, a minister with gullibility, and love of notoriety, willing to listen to and gabble it, and third, a newspaper anxiously willing to publish it."

"It appears that we have all these elements making up this piece," he said, referring to the article in Monday's Courier, a copy of which he clutched during the whole evening.

Absolute silence greeted the reading of the alleged words of the former President.

Rev. Scott was on the floor again. "We're not quite through with the whole thing," said he. "It is unwise to unroll the whole roll of twine. There are some things I would like to have done. I have suggested that some things be done by the police force and they have not been done."

"Did you come to the mayor?" Mr. Duggan asked.

"No; I went to the police."

First Mr. Scott referred to non-enforcement of the curfew ordinance. "Some boys have been caught robbing stores," he said. "If the curfew ordinance were in force wouldn't it help?"

"I believe it would," admitted the mayor.

"Some of our girls are running the streets at 14 and 15 years of age; some are about to become mothers. I know it. Would not the curfew help?"

"Well, we have been chasing them home lately," replied the mayor. "The police have been after that. You are right. There is a good deal of truth in what you say."

"We want the curfew enforced," Mr. Scott went on.

Chief of Police Thomas McDonald explained the police did not have authority to lock up children under 18; that all they could do was send them home.

"A second thing we hope to accomplish—perhaps you have been trying—I hope it is true—to close all these places, mollywop toward water street and referring to disorderly houses and speakeasies, Rev. Scott continued."

"Well I guess we have them pretty well closed," the mayor replied, causing another ripple of laughter in the audience.

Chief McDonald explained he and his force were doing their best; that the police had the evidence on record at the station and that it was up to the constables and other officers to act. A year ago, in April, he explained, 30 to 40 persons were taken to Uniontown by former County Detective John J. Smith and not one, he said, was convicted and sentenced. He contended that all that the city could do was impose a penalty for breach of the peace. In the county court, he said, the offense could be made a misdemeanor. The chief said much had been accomplished in the four months he has been at the head of the force. All the street walkers have been chased out of town, he added.

The minister said he had heard reports that the police were not given the proper backing. The mayor replied he had given the chief full authority to "clean up the city." Mr. Duggan pleaded sickness as a possible excuse for laxity of enforcement of the law during his administration, saying he had been away from duty a great deal of the time.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking laxatives or trying to push up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without gripping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

"I know the animus of The Courier will cause it to publish anything," the mayor said, in another attack, forgetting his rage at publication of the statement that he had been "led around by crooks." "We know the reason. The people above The Courier will get after them. When we chased out the slot machines, we did a grievous thing and The Courier to this day has been against us. They have printed a whole lot of stuff about us."

The mayor said he thought the information the minister had gotten from friends of the executive was "invented" for a "motive." Later he said when he read of the sermon he concluded it was "the first gun in the campaign for mayor," adding that he is not a candidate.

"If you think that way you are having a little pipe dream," was Rev. Scott's reply.

Another thing that stirred him up, Rev. Scott said, was the boldness of persons who insult women and girls on the streets. His wife, he said, was insulted a recent evening in Crawford avenue not far from Brimstone corner. He related an incident of a girl being insulted the same day.

The minister also told of a negro boy walking up street with a quart of whisky that was not even wrapped. He was taking it home to his "dad" and told where he got it, the minister said. The mayor argued that it was probably not whisky. The minister insisted it was, or that at least it smelled like it.

Rev. Scott concluded with an offer to submit evidence of law-breaking to the mayor and chief in private, and again he invited all to hear his Sunday sermon.

"I see I will not have to resign," said the mayor as the "investigation" ended.

THIS WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE

Brings a Ray of Hope to Childless Women

Lowell, Mass.—"I had anemia from the time I was sixteen years old and was very irregular. I did any house-cleaning or washing I would faint and have to be put to bed. My husband thinking every minute was my last. After reading your text-book for women I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash, and have never felt better than I have the last two years. I can work, eat, sleep, and feel as strong as can be. Doctors told me I could never have children—I was too weak—but after taking Vegetable Compound it strengthened me so I gave birth to an eight pound boy. I was well all the time, did all my work up to the last day, and had a natural birth. Everybody who knew me was surprised, and when they ask me what made me strong I tell them with great pleasure, 'I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never felt better in my life.' Use this testimonial at any time. Mrs. Elizabeth Smart, 122 W. Sixth St., Lowell, Mass. This experience of Mrs. Smart is surely a strong recommendation for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is only one of a great many similar cases.

AMERICAN SAILORS DRAW FIRST GERMAN BLOOD IN THE WAR

combated—men, women and children—safely out of the city.

The American flag was temporarily hoisted over the British embassy, and the British flag stood on guard over the building, because there were reports that an attack was to be made upon it, and Mr. Morgenthau had been requested by the British government to take charge of British interests.

But the most thrilling episode in the Scorpion's long sojourn in the Bosphorus occurred on May 25, 1916.

Long lines of transports, with 40,000 or 50,000 troops aboard, were at the wharves ready to sail for the reinforcement of the Ottoman army at the Gallipoli. An escort of destroyers and patrol boats had been sent ahead into the Sea of Marmora, and one of the destroyers was racing about in the Bosphorus.

The opportunity for a sudden blow to the allies was excellent, if anybody could get near enough to strike the "scorpion." Approach, however, meant running the blockade of mines, and shore guns and other defenses which, thus far, had made the Dardanelles impregnable.

So the Turks felt fairly safe. Warning from Submarine. A rumor spread, however, on May 24 that the Scorpion, a submarine, had addressed a letter to the neutral embassies requesting that the neutral ships, for their own protection, should immediately withdraw from the open harbor.

It was said that the letter had been given to the captain of a Greek tugboat. This assertion, however, has never been verified, nor has a copy of the letter ever been seen. So far as is known it was never delivered. Suspicion exists that it fell into Turkish hands. This suspicion is strengthened by the fact that almost coincidentally several tugboat captains of Hellenic race "disappeared."

It was with a sense of expectancy quickened by this rumor that the Scorpion's lookout watched the early morning preparations of the Turkish transports to sail.

The moment for departure had almost arrived when a sudden shout from the quartermaster of the Scorpion brought all hands scrambling on deck.

"British submarine," came the cry. Sure enough, heading at full speed for the troop ships, with the rattle of water white around the periscope, was a British submarine.

The Turks had made a simultaneous discovery of it, and their artillery opened fire. The marksmanship was poor, however, for all the shells fell harmless.

Blows Up Turkish Craft. The submarine made a full sweep of the harbor, and when only 100 yards from the Turkish field guns fired its first torpedo.

A moment later there was a terrific explosion. A Turkish lighter, vacated from the water, and presently fell back again in fragments. A big hole was blown in the side of an empty transport.

The first torpedo was followed almost immediately by a second. The Scorpion's crew watched its white streak as it sped past their gunboat on the port side, headed up the Bosphorus. It went under a small boat and passed on upstream to sink without doing the foe any injury.

Meanwhile a Turkish torpedo boat with no little impetuosity, had dashed at full speed toward the hostile visitor, evidently intent upon ramming it. But the British were too quick, and when the Turks reached the point where the submarine had been, it was no longer there—submergence had carried it to safe depths.

All the harbor police and patrol boats were rushing around looking for the "sub." Turkish naval officers of high rank grabbed rifles and put out in motor boats, hoping to get a shot at the invader. The shore artillery continued to rain shells around. Some of the shells missed the neutral shipping much more seriously than they did the British enemy. "They came so near the Scorpion," said Lieutenant Commander Stewart F. Bryant, one of its officers, "that the men had to be ordered below decks. The Scorpion, in the midst of the excitement, beat all its previous records for getting up steam and shifting position."

Stop, Turk Expedition. Nothing more was seen of the submarine, which made its escape without suffering any damage. While the British had not done any very serious harm—there had been no loss of life—they had succeeded in producing a profound effect. The Turks did not dare venture out with their transports. All the troops were disembarked and the sea expedition to the Dardanelles abandoned. The reinforcements proceeded to the trenches either by rail or on foot.

The Fourth of July was celebrated on the Scorpion in 1916, and one of the interesting features of the celebration was the reading of the Declaration of Independence by an Englishman who was a guest.

Soon thereafter it was assigned a berth in the Golden Horn, between the two bridges which connect Stamboul, the old Turkish quarter, with Pera, the European section. The new position gave the crew an opportunity to watch a daily panorama of ceaseless change and interest. At some hour in the 24 a sample of practically every race and tribe on the face of the earth passed over one or the other of these bridges. Nowhere can be seen a more amazing array of costumes, bizarre, colorful, oriental.

Sec. Strains Shown. Officers and men of the Scorpion saw the Turkish troops commanded by German officers going away to war, they saw the Turkish wounded returning, they saw the British prisoners captured at Gallipoli, marching to the Turkish prison camps. "Enver Pasha," the Turkish minister of war, attended by his Turkish advisors, was a daily spectacle, speeding over the bridges in his big touring car.

Near by lay the yacht of the fugitive khedive of Egypt, a beautiful vessel. Not far away was the steamship General, the headquarters of the German admiralty staff, which, in reality, directed Turkish operations. Toward the Bosphorus was a pontoon bridge, over which, occasionally, the Scorpion and his escort could be seen passing in pomp and magnificence.

German submarines were frequently seen. They would go gliding by the Scorpion on their way to the neutral quays and dry docks. One, it was said, had made the trip from Kiel, sinking two British warships in the Dardanelles en route. An interesting story, which our officers could cover "verily" was told in Constantinople about the French submarine "Touquet," which was captured by the Turks.

Heroic Sacrifice of French. The Moslems could not understand the machinery, so they ordered the French engineers to start the engines. The Frenchmen started the submerging apparatus and the "sub" dived, carrying French and Turks along with it, never to return.

The first American battles with the Germans were fought, I think, beyond all question by the crew of the Scorpion.

One night two men from the Scorpion were sitting near a large group of sailors from the Dresden and the Goeben. One of the Germans walked over to them and said, in English: "The German navy can lick the American navy any time it wants to come out."

"Come out?" shouted one of the Scorpion boys. "Whaddya mean 'come out'?" "And what are you doing here? Why aren't you tied up in the Kiel canal with the rest of the schooner sinkers? Take that!"

Shed First German Blood. But! So the battle began. "At ten o'clock," according to neutral accounts, "seventeen Germans were being smashed by four American fists. Then the Germans threw beer bottles, and the Americans went down."

But the Scorpion's crew drew first German blood!

The Scorpion is still at Constantinople, under the command of Admiral and United States High Commissioner Mark J. Bristol, but according to the dispatch at the beginning of this article—received and published since the first writing of the Scorpion's story—there is a "For Sale" sign hanging on it.

Whoever may buy it, or wherever it may go, it leaves an honorable tradition in its wake.

(By the way, the Scorpion's Secretary, Daniel, will tell why the Atlantic fleet was not sent into the war zone.)

MAY 21 WILL BE GALA DAY IN THIS CITY

Just 21 more days will see the Connellville Independent in action on Fayette Field. On May 21 the curtain will be drawn aside from the local ball season and the Cokers will be facing a schedule of teams that have been making a name in independent baseball for many years. The opener has not yet been announced but the management is casting about for a real attraction.

If possible, the opener will be made a real event. Merchants will be asked to display their flags and give the city a touch of celebration cheer. The Cokers proved last year that baseball would survive here, and now it is felt that there ought to be a real "send-off" at the start of this season.

There will be a number of new faces in the line-up. Efforts are being made to increase the strength of the outfit and to do this more outside men will be brought in.

On the mound Herrod will probably be used. The Pittsburgher proved very effective last season. The team will also have a string on Hauser, another Pittsburgher, who showed some fine stuff in his fourth of July game here last year.

"Not yet," said Peterson, halting suddenly in his walk. "I must see the Tank before I go to Paris. We'll have him down here now. Give him an injection, Henry—and, by God, we'll make the fool sign! Then I can actually take it over to the meeting with me."

He passed in the door, followed by Lakington, and the girl who the chair stood up and stretched her arms above her head. For a moment or two Hugh watched her; then he, too, stood up, right and, and passed his cramped limbs.

"Make the fool sign," the words echoed through his brain, and he stared thoughtfully at the gray light which showed the approach of dawn. What was the best thing to do? "Make the fool sign," he thought, generally implied, if other means failed, and Hugh had no intention of watching any man tortured. At the same time something of the nature of the diabolical plot conceived by Peterson was beginning to take a definite shape in his mind, though many of the most important links were still missing.

And with this knowledge had come the realization that he was no longer a free agent. The thing had ceased to be a mere sporting gamble, with himself and a few other chosen spirits matched against a gang of criminals. It had become—if his surmise was correct—a national affair. England herself, a very existence, was threatened by one of the vilest plots ever dreamed of by the brain of man. And then, with a sudden rage at his own impotence, he realized that even now he had nothing definite to go on. He must know more, somehow; or else he must get to Paris; he must attend that meeting at the Ritz. Then a sound from the room below brought him back to his original point. The American was sitting in a chair, and Lakington, with a hypodermic syringe in his hand, was holding his arm.

"He made the injection, and Hugh watched the millionaire. He was still undecided as to how to act, but for the moment, at any rate, there was nothing to be done. And he was very curious to hear what Peterson had to say to the wealthy man who, up to date, had figured so largely in every round.

After a while the American ceased sitting vacantly in front of him, and passed his hand dazedly over his forehead. Then he half rose from his chair and stared at the two men sitting facing him. His eyes came round to the girl, and with a groan he sank back again, plucking feebly with his hands at his dressing gown.

"Better, Mr. Potts," said Peterson, smiling.

"I—stammered the other. "Where am I?"

"At the Elms, Goddard. If you wish to know."

"I thought—I thought—" He rose away. "What do you want with me?"

"Tush, tush," murmured Peterson. "There is a lady present, Mr. Potts. And our wants are so simple. Just your signature to a little agreement, by which in return for certain services you promise to join us in our—labors in the near future."

"I remember," cried the millionaire. "Now I remember. You swine—your filthy swine, I refuse—absolutely."

"The trouble is, my friend, that you are altogether too big an employer of labor to be allowed to refuse, as I pointed out to you before. You must be in with us, otherwise you might wreck the scheme. Therefore I require your signature."

"And when you've got it," cried the American, "what good will it be to you? I shall repudiate it."

"Oh! no, Mr. Potts," said Peterson with a thoughtful smile. "I can assure you, you won't. The distressing malady from which you have recently been suffering will again have you in its grip. It renders you quite unfit for business."

"While there was silence, and the millionaire stared round the room like a trapped animal.

"Peterson," he cried at last. "It's an outrage against humanity. You can do what you like."

"Then we'll start with a little more thumb-screw," remarked Peterson, striding over to the desk and opening a drawer. "An astonishingly effective instrument, as you can see if you look at your thumb." He stood in front of the quivering man, balancing the instrument in his hands. "It was under the influence you gave us the first signature, which we so regrettably lost. I think we'll try it again."

"The American gave a strangled cry of terror, and then the unexpected happened. There was a crash as a pane of glass splintered and fell to the floor beside Lakington, and with a shriek the sprang aside and looked up.

"Peep-bo!" came a well-known voice from the skylight. "Clap him one over the jaw, Potts, my boy; but don't you miss."

CHAPTER VIII.

In which he goes to Paris for a Night.

ONE.

Drummond had acted on the spur of the moment. It would have been almost impossible for any man, certainly one of his caliber, to have missed the American being tortured without doing something to try to help him. At the same time the last thing he had wanted to do was to give away his presence on the roof. The information he had obtained that night was of vital importance that it was

"You intrigue me, ugly one," she remarked, looking up, "intrigue me awfully. I am now going out to get a really good view of the Kill."

And the next moment Potts was alone. He was staring up at the skylight, apparently bewildered by the sudden turn of events, and then he heard the voice of the man above speaking clearly and insistently.

"Go out of the room. Turn to the right. Open the front door. You'll see a house, through some trees. Go to it. When you get there, stand on the lawn and call 'Phyllis! Do you get me?'"

The American nodded dazedly; then he made a great effort to pull himself together, as the voice continued:

"Go at once. It's your only chance. Tell her I'm on the roof here."

With a sigh of relief he saw the millionaire leave the room; then he straightened himself up, and proceeded to reconnoiter his own position. There was a bare chance that the American would get through, and if he did, everything might yet be well. If he didn't—Hugh shrugged his shoulders grimly and laughed.

It had become quite light, and after a moment's indecision Drummond took a running jump, and caught the ridge of the sloping roof on the side nearest the road. From where he was he could not see The Larches, and so he did not know what luck the American had had. But he realized that it was long odds against his getting through, and that his chief hope lay in himself. It occurred to him that far too few un-biased people knew where he was; it further occurred to him that it was a state of affairs which was likely to continue unless he remedied it himself. And so, just as Peterson came striding around a corner of the house followed by several men and a long ladder, Hugh commenced to sing. He shouted, he roared at the top of his very powerful voice, and all the time he watched the men below with a wary eye.

It was just as two laborers came in to investigate the hideous din that Peterson's party discovered the ladder was too short by several yards.

Then with great rapidity the audience grew. A passing millman; two commercial travelers, a gentleman of slightly inebricated aspect, whose trousers left much to the imagination; and finally more farm laborers. Never had such a tit-bit of gossip for the local rich have been seen in the neighborhood. It would furnish a topic of conversation for weeks to come. And still Hugh sang and Peterson cursed; and still the audience grew. Then, at last, there came the police with notebook all complete, and the singer stopped singing to laugh.

The next moment the laugh froze on his lips. Standing by the skylight, with his revolver raised, was Lakington, and Hugh knew by the expression of his face that his finger was trembling on the trigger. Out of view of the crowd below he did not know of its existence, and, in a flash, Hugh realized his danger.

"Good morning, Henry," he said quietly. "I wouldn't fire if I were you. We are observed, as they say in 'indol-dama. If you don't believe me," his voice grew a little tense, "just wait while I talk to Peterson, who is at present deep in converse with the village constable and several farm laborers."

It is doubtful whether any action in Hugh Drummond's life ever cost him such an effort of will as the turning of his back on the man standing two yards below him, but he did it apparently without thought. He gave one last glance at the face convulsed with rage, and then with a smile he looked down at the crowd below.

"Peterson," he called out affably, "there's a pal of yours up here—dear old Henry. And he's very annoyed at my concert. Would you just speak to him, or would you like me to be more explicit? He is so annoyed that there might be an accident at any moment, and I see that the police have arrived. So—"

Even at that distance he could see Peterson's eyes of fury, and he chuckled softly to himself. But when the leader spoke, his voice was as suave as ever; the eternal cigar glowed evenly at its normal rate.

"The words came clearly through the still summer air."

"Your turn, Henry," said Drummond. "Peterson's voice off—yes, dear Peterson. I am here, even upon the roof, with a liver of hideous aspect."

"With a mighty effort Lakington controlled himself, and his voice, when he answered, was calm."

"Yes, I'm here. What's the matter?"

"Nothing," cried Peterson. "But we've got quite a large and appreciative audience down here, attracted by our friend's charming concert, and I've just sent for a large ladder by which he can come down and join us. So there is nothing that you can do—nothing." He repeated the word with a faint emphasis, and Hugh smiled genially.

"I'm interested in quite a number of things, Captain Drummond," said Lakington slowly; "but they all count as nothing beside one—getting even with you. And when I do—"

He dropped the revolver into his coat pocket, and stood motionless, staring at the soldier.

The next instant he opened a door in the skylight which Hugh had failed to discover during the night, and, climbing down a ladder inside the room, disappeared from view.

THE KAUFMANN & BAER STORE'S

The Promised KAUFMANN & BAER Sale for "Every Day During May" -- Starts Monday, May 2nd

It is the sale that is on everyone's lips EVERYWHERE. It is the sale for which much is promised—much is expected—the sale that will go beyond all expectations. The K. & B. Seventh Anniversary Sale is to be the store's SUPREME effort in VALUE-GIVING. And GREATER VALUE-GIVING has been the K. & B. policy for SEVEN YEARS. It has been the foundation on which this business was founded. It has been the reason for its phenomenal SUCCESS.

Over SIX MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF MERCHANDISE—embracing OUR ENTIRE STOCK, and thousands of dollars worth of NEW MERCHANDISE --go into the 7th Anniversary Sale.

We do not believe that another such collection of merchandise has ever been brought together by another store to sell at the low Anniversary Sale prices. Manufacturers who find a big outlet here the year 'round have CO-OPERATED—making enormous concessions. We, in turn, are curtailing our own always fair margin of profit. In many instances MERCHANDISE WILL BE SOLD AT ACTUAL COST TO US.

Please do not look upon this wonderful K. & B. Anniversary Sale as a mere sale. It is an EPOCH MAKING EVENT IN RETAIL MERCHANDISING. The spirit and purpose behind it is much bigger, broader and finer than the ordinary sale. The real feeling underlying the entire occasion is a desire to express our appreciation of the public good-will, and a wish to reciprocate that sentiment in the only practical way we could think of—A DIVIDEND TO OUR CUSTOMERS, PAID IN STARTLING VALUES.

Preparations for the K. & B. Seventh Anniversary Sale came at a most opportune time. Mills, factories, wholesalers and jobbers have lately been contending with a STAGNANT MARKET. Cancellations and lack of orders left LARGE SURPLUSES of good merchandise on the market for which there was no immediate demand. It was then that the K. & B. Store—with its large staff of buyers—stepped into the market. READY CASH and a QUICK OUTLET—was the bait that closed many startling transactions.

And so the K. & B. Seventh Anniversary Sale is to be an event for ALL. The whole K. & B. Store Family has been keyed to the highest pitch of enthusiasm over the coming sale—and its WONDERFUL BARGAINS. Every resource of this great institution has been called upon—every department is co-operating—every department is participating—EVERYWHERE throughout the store there will be SURPRISES AND BARGAINS.

It will be a sale well worth going to Pittsburgh to attend. Tell your friends about it. Tell them to tell other friends. Make up your shopping parties and plan to come MONDAY to the KAUFMANN & BAER STORE, Pittsburgh.
